Chemo Chuckles and Treatment Tears: One Woman's Story of Family, Friends, Love and Sex After Being Diagnosed with Breast Cancer is the autobiographical story of Abby Brown, a 25-year veteran educator in the little elementary school on a hill perched above the St. Croix River in Minnesota -a teacher who has been beloved by two generations of school children in the small town upon which Garrison Keillor largely based his fictional Lake Wobegon. When she was diagnosed with breast cancer, the entire town took to the Caring Bridge website to support every step of her discovery and recovery. Both witty and wistful, terrifying and beautiful, this is not just a cancer journal. It's a secret guide both to the horrors of cancer treatment, and to the incredible power and stability of true love -both familial and romantic. Although this doesn't read like a romance novel, Abby's at-times gritty, at times steamy, love for her husband knows no bounds, and his support and love for her is the red thread that holds the book's chronological narrative together. Her two boys and their wide-eyed innocence and fear are incredibly poignant, and the author doesn't hold back in describing the altogether too common, yet complex struggles of a family trying to cope with the fallout of a cancer diagnosis. Abby writes in her Introduction about the loss of her hair (which the title of the book is based on): In musing about possible titles for this book, I considered, What About the Hair Down There?...
