Excerpt: .to the outer back Beyond the Overflow; By rolling plain and rocky shelf, With stockwhip in his hand, He reached at last, oh lucky elf, The Town of Come-and-help-yourself In Rough-and-ready Land. And if it be that you would know The tracks he used to ride, Then you must saddle up and go Beyond the Queensland side--Beyond the reach of rule or law, To ride the long day through, In Nature s homestead--filled with awe You then might see what Clancy saw And know what Clancy knew. THE BALLAD OF THE CALLIOPE By the far Samoan shore, Where the league-long rollers pour All the wash of the Pacific on the coral-guarded bay, Riding lightly at their ease, In the calm of tropic seas, The three great nations warships at their anchors proudly lay. Riding lightly, head to wind, With the coral reefs behind, Three Germans and three Yankee ships were mirrored in the blue; And on one ship unfurled Was the flag that rules the world--For on the old Calliope the flag of England flew. When the gentle off-shore breeze, That had scarcely stirred the trees, Dropped down to utter stillness, and the glass began to fall, Away across the main Lowered the coming hurricane, And far away to seaward hung the cloud wrack like a pall. If the word had passed around, Let us move to safer ground; Let us steam away to seaward --then this tale were not to tell! But each...
