Handsome book, cream-colored boards textured to look like suede, with bright red metallic gilt title impressed on spine, in mactching red and cream decorated jacket, with red metallic title embossed on front . The novels of the incomparable Margaret Drabble are a delight . The Washington Post says that reading them has become something of a rite of passage . The Los Angeles Times says she is ' as meticulous as Jane Austen and as deadly as Evelyn Waugh ' . In this book, Barbara Halliwell, on a grant at Oxford, receives an unexpected package . a memoir by a Korean crown princess, written more than 200 years ago . A highly appropriate gift for Barbara's impending trip to Seoul . But from whom ? . The story she avidly reads on the plane turns out to be one of great intrigue as well as tragedy . The Crown Princess Hyegyong recounts in extraordinary detail the ways of the Korean court two hundred years before, and confesses the family dramas that left her childless, and her husband dead by his own hand . Perhaps it is the loss of a child that resonates so deeply with Barbara . but she has little time to think of such things, as she has just arrived in Korea
